

Constantine Risks Revolution Rather Than Enter War

Zaimis Cabinet Remains Instead of Being Superceded by Venezilos, Head of War Party

GREEK RULER DETERMINED ON PEACE

London, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—King Constantine of Greece is risking revolution to avoid going to war. Premier Zaimis, head of Greek neutrality cabinet, is to remain in office, a dispatch from Athens stated today. Parliament will be dissolved, the message stated. Zaimis will try to reconstruct his ministry. Its old members will be retained, the Athens message reported, but two new ones will be added. It is taken for granted that these will be representatives of the war party. Probably one of them will be ex-premier Venezilos, the party leader, if he can be persuaded to accept. If he will do so is considered very doubtful, however. The king's plan is to endeavor to satisfy the war element by giving it ministerial representation, but to deprive it of any real power by keeping it in a hopeless minority in the cabinet.

BULGARIANS CAPTURE CAPITAL OF SERBIA

Communication From Germany to Constantinople Will be Made

Berlin, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—The Bulgarians have captured Nish, the war office announced today. The Serbian capital's fall follows three days of heavy fighting according to the report.

Ushing down Morava valley toward Nish from the north the Germans have taken Varvarin only 35 miles from Nish itself. This leaves only a 35 mile stretch to be covered on their rail connection completely across Serbia-made, since the Bulgarians held the line from Nish southeast to the frontier. Though there may be Serbians between Varvarin and Nish it was considered certain here that they must already be doing their utmost to escape to the west from between the closing jaws of the German-Bulgarian trap, so that rail communication from Germany to Constantinople is deemed a matter of only hours.

PHONES FIRST NAVAL ORDER SENT BY WIRELESS

Daniels Sends Word to Brooklyn Navy Yard, Audible Thousands of Miles

Washington, Nov. 6.—Secretary Daniels transmitted the first naval order ever sent by wireless telephone today to Rear Admiral Usher at the New York Navy yard. From his desk in the Navy department the secretary talked to the commandant of the New York navy yard by way of the big government radio towers at Arlington and ordered a report on repairs to the dreadnought New York. Navy officials say the achievement brings closer the day when a secretary of the navy may sit at his desk in Washington and talk to the fleet commanders all over the world.

Secretary Daniels transmitted this verbal order, which was taken down by a stenographer in Admiral Usher's office and acknowledged verbally by the Admiral himself.

"Read Admiral Usher, commandant, New York Navy yard:

"Report as soon as practicable after the arrival of the New York how the repairs recommended can be completed. Daniels."

New York, Nov. 6.—(By United Press.)—President Wilson yesterday afternoon declined to comment on the statement given out at Washington by William J. Bryan attacking his national defense program as outlined in the Manhattan Club speech. The president obtained his first information of Bryan's attack from the United Press. He read a summary of the United Press dispatch at the St. Regis Hotel just before leaving with Mrs. Galt, his fiancée, for a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Cleveland H. Johns.

PLANS BEING MADE FOR ENLARGEMENT OF DAIRY INDUSTRY

N. Y. C. Plan To Cooperate With Local Business and Farming Interests

Natural Conditions Exceptionally Well Adapted to Dairying—Special Rates Will be Given for Carrying Milk to Market.

In connection with the proposed plan of the N. Y. C. railroad to cooperate with local farmers in the development of the dairy industry in Clearfield county, the following interesting letter has been received by the chamber of commerce from the agricultural department of the railroad, under date of November 1:

As you requested in our recent conversation, I am sending you herewith an outline of our plans for cooperating with the local people in encouraging the development of the dairy industry in Clearfield county.

We feel that the first step in the development of any line of agriculture is to show the farmer that he can profitably engage in it. In the case of the dairy industry in Clearfield county, the lack of other than a local market for milk prevents farmers from enlarging their dairy operations, as they are, of course, unwilling to produce more milk than the local market can use to advantage.

Since natural conditions are exceptionally well adapted to dairying in this section we have decided to obtain a market for milk and dairy products by putting in force rates between the dairy sections on our lines and the Mill Hall milk condensary. These rates will enable farmers to make baggage car shipments of a few cans to the condensary at prices which make the proposition attractive.

The second step in the development of the plan is to arrange for carload shipments of good dairy cows into this section, after a canvass of the territory has been made to determine the number that can be disposed of to advantage. In this way farmers who wish to enlarge their dairy business can do so without paying excessive prices for cows which otherwise would have to be brought into this territory in small lots.

As a further step in the development of the dairy industry, we hope to place pure bred bulls in this territory on much the same plan as we have already done in New York state, where we give farmers the use of an excellent bull free of charge for the improvement of their own, and their neighbor's herd.

In connection with the foregoing plan the County Farm bureau which you are now organizing should be of special benefit in enabling farmers to select cows of the best type, and compound feeding rations to the best advantage.

Summing up the matter, I believe that by affording a profitable outlet for milk and then by furnishing means for the securing of more and better stock, we can aid farmers in Clearfield county in increasing their dairy operations to their own and our railroad's mutual benefit.

We do not expect to receive any very great immediate returns from the milk traffic in the near future, but we believe it is a step that will result eventually in increasing the number of cows in Clearfield county and developing the livestock and dairy interests to a point where Clearfield county can have several condensaries of its own from which it is natural to believe, that farmers and business interests will profit as they have in other sections where condensaries have been established.

A canvass of this territory is to be made in the near future with a view to acquainting farmers with the prices which they can obtain for milk and interesting them generally in the advancement of dairying in their own county.

I hope that the plan may be successful and that we may have the hearty cooperation of all Clearfield's business and farming interests along our lines in Clearfield county.

FORMER COLUMBIA STUDENT AMBASSADOR FROM CHINA

Dr. V. K. W. Koo a Most Brilliant International Law Student

New York, Nov. 6.—(By United Press.)—Hundreds of young men and women scattered throughout the United States remember their young Columbia University friend V. K. Wellington Koo. It hasn't been so many months since he graduated with them and went home to China. Should they desire to see Dr. Koo now, they will find him, Minister to the United States, at the Chinese Embassy in Washington.

Dr. Koo is just 30 years old. To him has been entrusted the destiny of China in its relation to the Western world. He has dedicated his life to "save China as a nation from being dismembered and swallowed up in the maelstrom of the European war."

Dr. Koo was popular at Columbia, a leader in student activities, editor of the college paper, and active in athletic and literary groups. Dr. Koo has grown a trifle more sedate since his diplomatic duties have been put upon him, say his friends who saw him in New York recently. He is hailed by Prof. John Bassett Moore and other enthusiastic American friends as "a most brilliant student of international law, comparable to the prodigies of a century ago—William Pitt, Fox and Alexander Hamilton."

INJURED CAPTAIN VIVIDLY RELATES STORY OF BATTLE

Soldier With Fractured Thigh Tells How He Waited 8 Hours For Stretcher Man

Soldiers in Trenches Calmly Smoke Before Making Charge—Rupsh Forward Yelling "La Marseillaise"

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—Once in a while you strike a soldier who has seen something and can tell about it. He is the twentieth man. With the others everything is a jumble of yells and explosions and running and falling and awakening in hospitals. A captain with a fractured thigh in a hospital here was one of the lucid ones. Said he:

"The Saturday morning of the advance everybody knew the assault was to begin at 9:15. The artillery preparation had been wonderful and the men were really impatient to get away. You can't blame them either, for it is no fun holding your hands and waiting for a thing like that.

"Some of them lighted cigarettes which they rolled themselves with fingers that didn't tremble a particle. Some lighted their pipes two minutes before the charge. There was a little joshing but the noise of the cannonade discouraged talk.

"Looking down the line I saw my lieutenant drawing on his white gloves. He was very young and this was to be his first charge. He wanted to do it properly, in Saint-Cyr style. Had I been close enough I would have ordered him to take them off. Hundreds of Saint-Cyr cadets were moved down at the beginning because they insisted on wearing white gloves. It was the 'marriage of youth and war' and the grooms must needs be the gloved.

"As our previously regulated and compared time-pieces reached 9:15 my lieutenant struck a match, lit a cigarette and leaped forward out of the trench waving his men after him. I leaped upon the parapet at the same instant, my men following me yelling something which was their 'Marseillaise'.

"I began to tell about me so I hurried the company forward into a little gully where we stopped a moment waiting for a hail. It was here that I learned of the death of my lieutenant in the white gloves. I rallied my men and started forward under a rain of machine-gun fire. A shell exploded so near that I was broken so I went on. Then a sharp bullet pierced my thigh breaking the bone. The battle was over so far as I was concerned. It was only 9:30, too—15 minutes from the start. Rotten luck.

"I bound up my wound as best I could and waited under the greatest display of fire-works one ever saw, waited for the stretcher men. Finally two came, but near me was one of my men with a bullet in his stomach, so I directed the men to take him. I told the men to come back for me, which they did at 6 o'clock in the afternoon."

Bryan Fires First Gun In Fight That Will Wreck Party

Openly Opposes President on Policy of Preparedness—Peace at Any Price Element to Follow Him

FORMER PREMIER DEFENDS HIS POSITION

Washington, Nov. 6. (Special to The Progress)—William Jennings Bryan, former secretary of state to President Wilson, last night fired the first gun in what is believed to be an active political campaign against the President which is viewed with concern by leaders of the party.

Bryan's first assault is against Wilson's preparedness policy, and comes in the form of a "statement," in which he assails the chief executive without regard for his high position, and with conspicuous absence of high sounding phrases which characterized his former mild utterances against Wilson.

Bryan declares that he will use his influence in the house of representatives to prevent the passage of appropriations to carry out the military and naval programs which have been tentatively agreed upon by the President and his advisors. In this he will have the active support of the peace at any price wing of the Democratic party, and it is believed that his activity will have a strong influence in national political affairs next year.

Washington, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—Former Secretary of State William J. Bryan today issued another statement in which he renewed his assurances of friendship for President Wilson. Bryan's statement is given in the following paragraph: "I have no plans formulated. I am doing what I believe to be the duty of every citizen to do. Those who approve of the President's plan do

The President's opinion was not to members of his party but to the people of all shades of opinion."

New York, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—Tammany leaders today were highly pleased with confirmation held here this week during the visit of President Wilson to New York. Friends of Roger Sullivan, of Chicago, also make it known that they were all looking forward to co-operation in the coming campaign with the national organization.

It is known that members of the national committee and close personal friends of the President who were in touch with him while he was here held conferences with Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall and with Sullivan. President Wilson himself did not attend these conferences but persons in close touch with the situation asserted that all differences that existed between Murphy and Sullivan organizations and the national organization at Washington had been ironed out. Both Murphy and Sullivan made it known that they now planned to support the President for re-nomination.

SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 6, 1915.

With the multitude of bank holidays already a serious inconvenience, it was rather startling to learn that October 16 was "Tobacco Day," and a positive relief to find that there was as yet no legal sanction for any further closing of doors. October 16 is not certainly known to be the anniversary of the discovery of tobacco by Columbus, or Sir Walter Raleigh's first pipeful, or of Jean Flot's introduction of the "fragrant weed" into the French army, but, according to the New York Sun, "it is the day that every person connected with the industry recognizes, when the dealer melloes and may sell you that quarter cigar for a dime," and when the institutional gear may get a free smoke from the same source.

QUININE PRICES IN WAR TIME.

"Quinine at $1.20 an ounce," says the Philadelphia Record, "may seem phenomenal to the present-day drug-gist, but 35 years ago the price was $3 or $4 an ounce at retail, and for small quantities the price was two cents a grain."

No doubt the cost was even greater than that in the North of 1861-5, and in the blockaded South the price of quinine, an article made contraband of war, rose in no great while to $100 an ounce. With calomel at $20 and quinine at $100 an ounce, with Richmond physicians charging $30 a visit, and with flour at $70 a barrel (in Confederate currency) when the war was only half over, proper care of neither soldiers, prisoners, nor civilians could have been possible. Such facts are an interesting reminder that our country has had its share of war-made suffering, in some particulars and at some points perhaps more grievous than is now endured in Europe.

FREAK PROFESSORS.

Once more the "freak" professors are having an opportunity to see themselves as the rest of the world sees them. A disciple of Malthus known as Professor Johnson is attracting considerable unenviable attention after telling the tax investigators of New York that if he were a czar he would tax married men rather than bachelors because the latter do not crowd the world with babies. He explained that nature limits the production of the lower animals and that tax commissioners or some other power ought to limit the production of human beings, regardless of the fact that the decreasing birth rate is already cause for great concern in most of the countries of the world.

There are so many freak professors in our colleges and so many quack "professors" outside of them that what should be an honorable title is falling more and more into disrepute. The questionable dignity of the title in our day is pointedly illustrated by the current story of the prominent North Carolinian who confessed that he felt embarrassed when he met Booker T. Washington, the Tuskegee educator. "I can't call so remarkable a man 'Booker,' as I would an ordinary negro," he said, "and I can't say 'Mr. Washington,' so I call him 'Professor.'" The friend to whom he thus described his difficulty is said to have remarked—and herein is the point of the story—that the compromise chosen was very appropriate, "for something between a negro and a gentleman is just about what a professor is."

SERVIA'S BLUNDERING ALLIES.

When Lord Lansdowne stood up in parliament the other day and artlessly announced that the English contingent at Salonici numbered only 13,000 men and that Serbia could not hold out much longer, he gave comfort to the Teutonic alliance as well as more clearly than ever revealed procrastination and mismanagement on the part of the British authorities. What became of the small and tardy British contingent he did not report, but it is known that the French force pushed forward, joined the Serbians and in a spirited battle checked the Bulgarian advance at at least one point. Although the situation is extremely unpromising, Serbia's strait does not yet seem to be as desperate as Lord Lansdowne has publicly confessed it to be.

From the accounts it would appear that the greater part of the country is still in the hands of its own people who are aided in its defense by its mountainous character. The point where the Teutonic allies and the Bulgarians have effected a junction is in the northwestern corner of the kingdom. Such an opening of the road to Constantinople may have accomplished their purpose for the time, and it may have been the intention to leave the effort to crush Serbia to a more convenient season. This would have given the Serbians and the Allies the needed time. At all events there seems to have been no good reason to give up the fight in advance, as the British authorities represented by Lord Lansdowne appear to have done. The procrastination and blundering displayed by the British so often, where land war has been concerned, were never more noticeable than in this affair.

"Recent dispatches from the Italian battlefields contained the information that the outpost defenses of the town of Riva had been captured from the Austrians after severe and prolonged struggles. A description of this quaint and beautiful south Tyrolean lake is the subject of a war primer given out by the National Geographic Society, which reads as follows: 'Riva is a bright, sheltered town, situated at the extreme northwestern end of incomparable Lake Garda, surrounded by splendid mountains and with a hundred and fifty miles of rugged Alps at its back. Along the western bank of the lake from the city, the heights fall sheer to the water, and upon these heights, beside the lake, a picturesque road takes its way over rock ledges, through tunnels and galleries; to Italy, only a few hours walk distant. The crags before the town are powerfully fortified, and these defensive works are carried on among the mountains upon the eastern side of the lake. 'Considerable traffic passes through this small lake port, whose 4,000 citizens live largely upon transit trade and the entertainment of visitors. Timber, coal and fruits are the staples of its trade. It, also, has some industry, the manufacture of paper and pottery; while silk-worms, fancy fruits and the olive are cultivated.' In peace time, it maintains regular steamship connection with Italy, and is one of the favored tourist portals to the Tyrol. The character of the people is Italian, and Italian is the current speech. 'The little port has belonged in turn to the bishopric of Trent, to Milan and to Venice, and has been a possession of Austria's since 1815. The Scaligers of Verona summered here during the height of their power. Venice made Riva their Newport, and Europe and America of today have sent each year many hundreds of representatives to enjoy the charm of the mountains, the delight of a soft, Mediterranean climate, the beauties of the wide, mountain-encrusted lake, and the delights of the international, seasonal society gathered here upon Garda.'"

LABOR FEDERATION OPENS CONVENTION IN SAN FRANCISCO

Convention Most Notable Convention of Labor Ever Convened

Many Important Questions Stated for Consideration—Effects of European War Upon Labor Most Important To be Discussed.

San Francisco, Nov. 6.—The most notable congress of organized labor ever held in this country, so far as the numbers represented and the interests involved are concerned, will begin in this city Monday morning with the opening of the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor. Two million organized workmen are sending their delegates—about 600 in number—to represent them.

The executive council of the Federation has been in session during the greater part of the week, completing their annual reports to be presented to the convention and finishing the details of the convention program.

Seldom if ever before in the history of the great organization have so many important questions been slated for consideration at the annual convention as are scheduled to come before the gathering about to convene. Foremost on the agenda will be the great subject of the world war and its effects upon labor and the industries in America. Touching on this subject President Samuel Gompers, in connection with his official call for the convention, issued a statement in which he said:

"The tremendous conflict now being waged in Europe and its possible consequences and results, not only upon the peoples of the European countries, but upon the people of America, as well as on the whole civilized world, must of necessity receive the deepest solicitude consideration of the working people of America. How and what further action can be taken by the American labor movement to help bring about an early peace among the warring nations of Europe, how that peace can be assured with the establishment and maintenance of justice, freedom and brotherhood the world over—these and other great questions of equal importance will of necessity occupy the attention of the San Francisco convention."

The prohibition question is another issue that is likely to be brought before the convention for consideration. Ever since this question became a live national issue the impression has prevailed that organized labor, taken as a whole, stood opposed to prohibition. This impression has been strengthened by the official action of several state federations and various other labor bodies affiliated with the American Federation in declaring against prohibition. The opposition to the labor bodies, it is understood, is based chiefly on the assumption that the closing of the saloons, distilleries, breweries and other concerns depending upon the manufacture and sale of liquor, would throw thousands of workmen out of employment, including the entire membership of several national unions affiliated with the federation. Those who have taken this stand believe that with prohibition now one of the leading national issues, the federation can no longer afford to ignore it and that the time has come when it should officially announce its position on the question.

The determination of this element to bring the issue to a head in the coming convention is likely to provoke some heated discussion on the floor. It is feared, in fact, that a serious split may occur in the ranks of organized labor over the liquor issue. While the brewery workers, bartenders, coopers and various other organized crafts are desirous of committing the federation to the defense of the liquor trade, there is an equally determined element that is strongly and outspokenly in favor of prohibition. It is reported that these advocates of prohibition are prepared to go so far as to withdraw from the federation and form a new organization to combat the liquor interests represented in the labor movement, should the coming convention officially declare itself against prohibition.

Owing to the many important questions to come up it is probably that two weeks will be required for the sessions of the convention. The opening session, which will be devoted to the exchange of greetings and the presentation of the officers' annual reports, will be held Monday morning in Festival Hall at the exposition.

Edwin Bevin and Charles G. Ammon, who will attend the convention as fraternal delegates from the British Trades Union Congress, have already arrived in the city. They represent hundreds of thousands of organized workmen in the United Kingdom. The Dominion Federation of Labor, representing the organized crafts in Canada, is also sending delegates to the convention.

BANTAM HORSE EXHIBITION OF NATIONAL HORSE SHOW

Professional Exhibitors Admitted to Novice Classes—Show Ends November 12

New York, Nov. 6.—(By United Press.)—Bantam high-stepping ponies, never before given much consideration among the thoroughbreds of horsemanship, have become so much the fashion that they are, together with the gorgeous gowns of the society women, a big feature of the National Horse Show which opened at Madison Square Garden here today. A few years ago the ponies were not represented in a single horse show either in America or abroad.

Another departure from the rules of former horse shows is the admission of professional exhibitors to novice classes. Professionals heretofore have been excluded. The American and Canadian Hackney horse societies have $500 prizes and gold medals for the best hackneys. The show will end November 12.

USE FOR TOBACCO STEMS.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 6.—A small army of men is being employed by the National Salt and Chemical Company in the work of buying up tobacco stems, which will be the principal fuel used by the company in the manufacture of chemicals in the furnace plant of one of the big breweries which was closed by the prohibition law and has now been taken over by the chemical concern.

While the tobacco stems are being used for fuel the smoke will be run through condensers and the residue will form an important ingredient used in the manufacture of chemicals. Among the products will be soft soap and salt-peter. This is the first time that a use has been found for tobacco stems. Local tobacco plants have always had them hauled away and dumped on refuse piles.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 6.—(By United Press.)—Apple growers who came today to the state apple show brought the best exhibits ever shown in Indiana. The marketing question has become acute because of the big crop.

To restore gray hair to its original color and beauty. No matter how old and faded your hair looks, or how long you have been gray, it will grow wonderfully keep your looking young, promote a luxuriant growth of healthy hair, stop its falling out and positively remove dandruff. Will not harm soil skin or hair. Will not harm your hair. Is not a dye. Refuse all substitutes; 50c and $1.00 a bottle at druggists.

FREE—We will send a large bottle free by return mail, to anyone who sends this coupon to The Children's Hospital, Boston, Mass., their name and address and the value of stamps to pay postage.

From Beauty Secret. C. W. No. 100 is not the best thing with which to remove dandruff. I never use animal matter on my hair. It forms a sort of skin on the scalp and hair. Your dandruff can be easily removed and the hair made brilliant, soft and fluffy by the use of this inexpensive home prepared shampoo, which is superior to any I have ever been able to buy. Dandruff is a teaspoonful of vasoline, in a cup of hot water. This, rubbed into the scalp, creates a rich, smooth texture which thoroughly cleanses both scalp and hair. An occasional shampoo with this mixture, following by thorough rinsing, will rid you of dandruff and dandruff, beautify your hair and make your head feel especially good.

ASSURANCE OF SAFETY

More than sixteen hundred thousand dollars (twice the $500,000 capital, and surplus and profits of over $600,000) must be lost by this bank's stockholders, before a depositor could lose a cent by shrinkage in value of the bank's assets.

But the strongest assurance of safety is not this vast sum of money, but the character of the men behind the bank.

You know them; eleven substantial business men of high standing in the community—

CONGRESS TO BE ASKED TO INCREASE MARINE CORPS

U. S. Marine Corps Will Not Be Represented at Military Show

New York, Nov. 6.—Because every man of their less than ten thousand is absolutely needed at his post at home or abroad the United States
Marine Corps will not be represented
at this year's military show at Madison square Garden.

The army and navy will be represented as usual but the little Marine Corps which is a part of the army yet both, can not afford to send even a squad to the 1915 tournament.

The "soldiers of the sea," 9,921 strong by law, form the last line of the national mobile defense, and the navy yards of the United States have been almost stripped of marines to furnish the landing forces for ships,
the expeditionary forces for Haiti,

the Managua, Nicaragua, as well as

fense posts at Guantanamo, Cuba.

Congress, at its next session, will be asked to increase the Marine Corps by 1,500 officers and men, and

as to secure adequate number of ma-

Constantine Risks Revolution Rather Than Enter War

Zaimis Cabinet Remains Instead of Being Superceded by Venezilos, Head of War Party

GREEK RULER DETERMINED ON PEACE

London, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—King Constantine of Greece is risking revolution to avoid going to war. Premier Zaimis, head of Greek neutrality cabinet, is to remain in office, a dispatch from Athens stated today. Parliament will be dissolved, the message stated. Zaimis will try to reconstruct his ministry. Its old members will be retained, the Athens message reported, but two new ones will be added. It is taken for granted that these will be representatives of the war party. Probably one of them will be ex-premier Venezilos, the party leader, if he can be persuaded to accept. If he will do so is considered very doubtful, however. The king's plan is to endeavor to satisfy the war element by giving it ministerial representation, but to deprive it of any real power by keeping it in a hopeless minority in the cabinet.

Blow Your Own Horn.

Modesty is all right. But it may be carried too far. Have you a good article for sale? Then blow your horn.

Insist that you have a good article. Then keep on insisting. If the people don't believe it at first tell it to them again. Eventually they'll give it a trial. Then, if you have the goods, you're on the highroad to success.

Drill the stuff into the public. Make the people see your ad. Give them something to think about. If you have the simple pure thing don't spare the adjectives.

BULGARIANS CAPTURE CAPITAL OF SERBIA

Communication From Germany to Constantinople Will be Made

Berlin, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—The Bulgarians have captured Nish, the war office announced today. The Serbian capital's fall follows three days of heavy fighting according to the report.

Ushing down Morava valley toward Nish from the north the Germans have taken Varvarin only 35 miles from Nish itself. This leaves only a 35 mile stretch to be covered on their rail connection completely across Serbia-made, since the Bulgarians held the line from Nish southeast to the frontier. Though there may be Serbians between Varvarin and Nish it was considered certain here that they must already be doing their utmost to escape to the west from between the closing jaws of the German-Bulgarian trap, so that rail communication from Germany to Constantinople is deemed a matter of only hours.

Daniels Sends Word to Brooklyn Navy Yard, Audible Thousands of Miles

Washington, Nov. 6.—Secretary Daniels transmitted the first naval order ever sent by wireless telephone today to Rear Admiral Usher at the New York Navy yard. From his desk in the Navy department the secretary talked to the commandant of the New York navy yard by way of the big government radio towers at Arlington and ordered a report on repairs to the dreadnought New York. Navy officials say the achievement brings closer the day when a secretary of the navy may sit at his desk in Washington and talk to the fleet commanders all over the world.

Secretary Daniels transmitted this verbal order, which was taken down by a stenographer in Admiral Usher's office and acknowledged verbally by the Admiral himself.

"Read Admiral Usher, commandant, New York Navy yard:

"Report as soon as practicable after the arrival of the New York how the repairs recommended can be completed. Daniels."

PLANS BEING MADE FOR ENLARGEMENT OF DAIRY INDUSTRY

N. Y. C. Plan To Cooperate With Local Business and Farming Interests

Natural Conditions Exceptionally Well Adapted to Dairying—Special Rates Will be Given for Carrying Milk to Market.

In connection with the proposed plan of the N. Y. C. railroad to cooperate with local farmers in the development of the dairy industry in Clearfield county, the following interesting letter has been received by the chamber of commerce from the agricultural department of the railroad, under date of November 1:

As you requested in our recent conversation, I am sending you herewith an outline of our plans for cooperating with the local people in encouraging the development of the dairy industry in Clearfield county.

We feel that the first step in the development of any line of agriculture is to show the farmer that he can profitably engage in it. In the case of the dairy industry in Clearfield county, the lack of other than a local market for milk prevents farmers from enlarging their dairy operations, as they are, of course, unwilling to produce more milk than the local market can use to advantage.

Since natural conditions are exceptionally well adapted to dairying in this section we have decided to obtain a market for milk and dairy products by putting in force rates between the dairy sections on our lines and the Mill Hall milk condensary. These rates will enable farmers to make baggage car shipments of a few cans to the condensary at prices which make the proposition attractive.

The second step in the development of the plan is to arrange for carload shipments of good dairy cows into this section, after a canvass of the territory has been made to determine the number that can be disposed of to advantage. In this way farmers who wish to enlarge their dairy business can do so without paying excessive prices for cows which otherwise would have to be brought into this territory in small lots.

As a further step in the development of the dairy industry, we hope to place pure bred bulls in this territory on much the same plan as we have already done in New York state, where we give farmers the use of an excellent bull free of charge for the improvement of their own, and their neighbor's herd.

In connection with the foregoing plan the County Farm bureau which you are now organizing should be of special benefit in enabling farmers to select cows of the best type, and compound feeding rations to the best advantage.

Summing up the matter, I believe that by affording a profitable outlet for milk and then by furnishing means for the securing of more and better stock, we can aid farmers in Clearfield county in increasing their dairy operations to their own and our railroad's mutual benefit.

We do not expect to receive any very great immediate returns from the milk traffic in the near future, but we believe it is a step that will result eventually in increasing the number of cows in Clearfield county and developing the livestock and dairy interests to a point where Clearfield county can have several condensaries of its own from which it is natural to believe, that farmers and business interests will profit as they have in other sections where condensaries have been established.

A canvass of this territory is to be made in the near future with a view to acquainting farmers with the prices which they can obtain for milk and interesting them generally in the advancement of dairying in their own county.

I hope that the plan may be successful and that we may have the hearty cooperation of all Clearfield's business and farming interests along our lines in Clearfield county.

It hasn't been so many months since he graduated with them and went home to China. Should they desire to see Dr. Koo now, they will find him, Minister to the United States, at the Chinese Embassy in Washington.

Dr. Koo is just 30 years old. To him has been entrusted the destiny of China in its relation to the Western world. He has dedicated his life to "save China as a nation from being dismembered and swallowed up in the maelstrom of the European war."

Dr. Koo was popular at Columbia, a leader in student activities, editor of the college paper, and active in athletic and literary groups. Dr. Koo has grown a trifle more sedate since his diplomatic duties have been put upon him, say his friends who saw him in New York recently. He is hailed by Prof. John Bassett Moore and other enthusiastic American friends as "a most brilliant student of international law, comparable to the prodigies of a century ago—William Pitt, Fox and Alexander Hamilton."

INJURED CAPTAIN VIVIDLY RELATES STORY OF BATTLE

Soldier With Fractured Thigh Tells How He Waited 8 Hours For Stretcher Man

Soldiers in Trenches Calmly Smoke Before Making Charge—Rupsh Forward Yelling "La Marseillaise"

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—Once in a while you strike a soldier who has seen something and can tell about it. He is the twentieth man. With the others everything is a jumble of yells and explosions and running and falling and awakening in hospitals. A captain with a fractured thigh in a hospital here was one of the lucid ones. Said he:

"The Saturday morning of the advance everybody knew the assault was to begin at 9:15. The artillery preparation had been wonderful and the men were really impatient to get away. You can't blame them either, for it is no fun holding your hands and waiting for a thing like that.

"Some of them lighted cigarettes which they rolled themselves with fingers that didn't tremble a particle. Some lighted their pipes two minutes before the charge. There was a little joshing but the noise of the cannonade discouraged talk.

"Looking down the line I saw my lieutenant drawing on his white gloves. He was very young and this was to be his first charge. He wanted to do it properly, in Saint-Cyr style. Had I been close enough I would have ordered him to take them off. Hundreds of Saint-Cyr cadets were moved down at the beginning because they insisted on wearing white gloves. It was the 'marriage of youth and war' and the grooms must needs be the gloved.

"As our previously regulated and compared time-pieces reached 9:15 my lieutenant struck a match, lit a cigarette and leaped forward out of the trench waving his men after him. I leaped upon the parapet at the same instant, my men following me yelling something which was their 'La Marseillaise'.

"I began to tell about me so I hurried the company forward into a little gully where we stopped a moment waiting for a hail. It was here that I learned of the death of my lieutenant in the white gloves. I rallied my men and started forward under a rain of machine-gun fire. A shell exploded so near that I was broken so I went on. Then a sharp bullet pierced my thigh breaking the bone. The battle was over so far as I was concerned. It was only 9:30, too—15 minutes from the start. Rotten luck.

"I bound up my wound as best I could and waited under the greatest display of fire-works one ever saw, waited for the stretcher men. Finally two came, but near me was one of my men with a bullet in his stomach, so I directed the men to take him. I told the men to come back for me, which they did at 6 o'clock in the afternoon."

Bryan Fires First Gun In Fight That Will Wreck Par

Openly Opposes President on Policy of Preparedness—Peace at Any Price Element to Follow Him

FORMER PREMIER DEFENDS HIS POSITION

Washington, Nov. 6. (Special to The Progress.)—William Jennings Bryan, former secretary of state to President Wilson, last night fired the first gun in what is believed to be an active political campaign against the President which is viewed with concern by leaders of the party.

Bryan's first assault is against Wilson's preparedness policy, and comes in the form of a "statement," in which he assails the chief executive without regard for his high position, and with conspicuous absence of high sounding phrases which characterized his former mild utterances against Wilson.

Bryan declares that he will use his influence in the house of representatives to prevent the passage of appropriations to carry out the military and naval programs which have been tentatively agreed upon by the President and his advisors. In this he will have the active support of the peace at any price wing of the Democratic party, and it is believed that his activity will have a strong influence in national political affairs next year.

Washington, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—Former Secretary of State William J. Bryan today issued another statement in which he renewed his assurances of friendship for President Wilson. Bryan's statement is given in the following paragraph: "I have no plans formulated. I am doing what I believe to be the duty of every citizen to do. Those who approve of the President's plan do Washington, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—Why should those who differ be silent? Why should a country like myself be denied the privilege and why should a Democrat's friendship for the President of the United States be questioned when he is with the President on an issue which has nothing in the line of the country or the party to commend it? The President's opinion was not to members of his party to the people of all shades of opinion."

DANCE—On

New York, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—Tammany leaders today were highly pleased with confirmation held here this week during the visit of President Wilson to New York. Friends of Roger Sullivan, of Chicago, also make it known that they were all looking forward to co-operation in the coming campaign with the national organization.

It is known that members of the national committee and close personal friends of the President who were in touch with him while he was here held conferences with Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall and with Sullivan. President Wilson himself did not attend these conferences but persons in close touch with the situation asserted that all differences that existed between Murphy and Sullivan organizations and the national organization at Washington had been ironed out. Both Murphy and Sullivan made it known that they now planned to support the President for re-nomination.

AUSTRIANS ATTEMPT TO CRUSH MONTENEGROANS

Mountainous Country Puts the Austrians at a Disadvantage

Vienna, Nov. 6. (By United Press.)—Vigorous attempts to crush the Montenegroans were reported in the statement issued here today. The Montenegroans are admittedly fighting so desperately as to be a hard proposition even for the Austrian's numerically superior forces. The mountainous country favors them and the Austrians of a large part of the advantage they would enjoy from their heavy artillery.

SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 6, 1915.

With the multitude of bank holidays already a serious inconvenience, it was rather startling to learn that October 16 was "Tobacco Day," and a positive relief to find that there was as yet no legal sanction for any further closing of doors. October 16 is not certainly known to be the anniversary of the discovery of tobacco by Columbus, or Sir Walter Raleigh's first pipeful, or of Jean Nicot's introduction of the "fragrant weed" into the French army, but, according to the New York Sun, "it is the day that every person connected with the industry recognizes, when the dealer melloes and may sell you that quarter cigar for a dime," and when the institutional gear may get a free smoke from the same source.

QUININE PRICES IN WAR TIME.

"Quinine at $1.20 an ounce," says the Philadelphia Record, "may seem phenomenal to the present-day drug-gist, but 35 years ago the price was $3 or $4 an ounce at retail, and for small quantities the price was two cents a grain."

No doubt the cost was even greater than that in the North of 1861-5, and in the blockaded South the price of quinine, an article made contraband of war, rose in no great while to $100 an ounce. With calomel at $20 and quinine at $100 an ounce, with Richmond physicians charging $30 a visit, and with flour at $70 a barrel (in Confederate currency) when the war was only half over, proper care of neither soldiers, prisoners, nor civilians could have been possible. Such facts are an interesting reminder that our country has had its share of war-made suffering, in some particulars and at some points perhaps more grievous than is now endured in Europe.

FREAK PROFESSORS.

Once more the "freak" professors are having an opportunity to see themselves as the rest of the world sees them. A disciple of Malthus known as Professor Johnson is attracting considerable unenviable attention after telling the tax investigators of New York that if he were a czar he would tax married men rather than bachelors because the latter do not crowd the world with babies. He explained that nature limits the production of the lower animals and that tax commissioners or some other power ought to limit the production of human beings, regardless of the fact that the decreasing birth rate is already cause for great concern in most of the countries of the world.

There are so many freak professors in our colleges and so many quack "professors" outside of them that what should be an honorable title is falling more and more into disrepute. The questionable dignity of the title in our day is pointedly illustrated by the current story of the prominent North Carolinian who confessed that he felt embarrassed when he met Booker T. Washington, the Tuskegee educator. "I can't call so remarkable a man 'Booker,' as I would an ordinary negro," he said, "and I can't say 'Mr. Washington,' so I call him 'Professor.'" The friend to whom he thus described his difficulty is said to have remarked—and herein is the point of the story—that the compromise chosen was very appropriate, "for something between a negro and a gentleman is just about what a professor is."

SERVIA'S BLUNDERING ALLIES.

When Lord Lansdowne stood up in parliament the other day and artlessly announced that the English contingent at Salonici numbered only 13,000 men and that Serbia could not hold out much longer, he gave comfort to the Teutonic alliance as well as more clearly than ever revealed procrastination and mismanagement on the part of the British authorities. What became of the small and tardy British contingent he did not report, but it is known that the French force pushed forward, joined the Serbians and in a spirited battle checked the Bulgarian advance at at least one point. Although the situation is extremely unpromising, Serbia's strait does not yet seem to be as desperate as Lord Lansdowne has publicly confessed it to be.

From the accounts it would appear that the greater part of the country is still in the hands of its own people who are aided in its defense by its mountainous character. The point where the Teutonic allies and the Bulgarians have effected a junction is in the northwestern corner of the kingdom. Such an opening of the road to Constantinople may have accomplished their purpose for the time, and it may have been the intention to leave the effort to crush Serbia to a more convenient season. This would have given the Serbians and the Allies the needed time. At all events there seems to have been no good reason to give up the fight in advance, as the British authorities represented by Lord Lansdowne appear to have done. The procrastination and blundering displayed by the British so often, where land war has been concerned, were never more noticeable than in this affair.

"Recent dispatches from the Italian battlefields contained the information that the outpost defenses of the town of Riva had been captured from the Austrians after severe and prolonged struggles. A description of this quaint and beautiful south Tyrolean lake is the subject of a war primer given out by the National Geographic Society, which reads as follows: 'Riva is a bright, sheltered town, situated at the extreme northwestern end of incomparable Lake Garda, surrounded by splendid mountains and with a hundred and fifty miles of rugged Alps at its back. Along the western bank of the lake from the city, the heights fall sheer to the water, and upon these heights, beside the lake, a picturesque road takes its way over rock ledges, through tunnels and galleries; to Italy, only a few hours walk distant. The crags before the town are powerfully fortified, and these defensive works are carried on among the mountains upon the eastern side of the lake. 'Considerable traffic passes through this small lake port, whose 4,000 citizens live largely upon transit trade and the entertainment of visitors. Timber, coal and fruits are the staples of its trade. It, also, has some industry, the manufacture of paper and pottery; while silk-worms, fancy fruits and the olive are cultivated.' In peace time, it maintains regular steamship connection with Italy, and is one of the favored tourist portals to the Tyrol. The character of the people is Italian, and Italian is the current speech. 'The little port has belonged in turn to the bishopric of Trent, to Milan and to Venice, and has been a possession of Austria's since 1815. The Scaligers of Verona summered here during the height of their power. Venice made Riva their Newport, and Europe and America of today have sent each year many hundreds of representatives to enjoy the charm of the mountains, the delight of a soft, Mediterranean climate, the beauties of the wide, mountain-encrusted lake, and the delights of the international, seasonal society gathered here upon Garda.'

Convention Most Notable Convention of Labor Ever Convened

Many Important Questions Stated for Consideration—Effects of European War Upon Labor Most Important To be Discussed.

San Francisco, Nov. 6.—The most notable congress of organized labor ever held in this country, so far as the numbers represented and the interests involved are concerned, will begin in this city Monday morning with the opening of the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor. Two million organized workmen are sending their delegates—about 600 in number—to represent them.

The executive council of the Federation has been in session during the greater part of the week, completing their annual reports to be presented to the convention and finishing the details of the convention program.

Seldom if ever before in the history of the great organization have so many important questions been slated for consideration at the annual convention as are scheduled to come before the gathering about to convene. Foremost on the agenda will be the great subject of the world war and its effects upon labor and the industries in America. Touching on this subject President Samuel Gompers, in connection with his official call for the convention, issued a statement in which he said:

"The tremendous conflict now being waged in Europe and its possible consequences and results, not only upon the peoples of the European countries, but upon the people of America, as well as on the whole civilized world, must of necessity receive the deepest solicitude consideration of the working people of America. How and what further action can be taken by the American labor movement to help bring about an early peace among the warring nations of Europe, how that peace can be assured with the establishment and maintenance of justice, freedom and brotherhood the world over—these and other great questions of equal importance will of necessity occupy the attention of the San Francisco convention."

The prohibition question is another issue that is likely to be brought before the convention for consideration. Ever since this question became a live national issue the impression has prevailed that organized labor, taken as a whole, stood opposed to prohibition. This impression has been strengthened by the official action of several state federations and various other labor bodies affiliated with the American Federation in declaring against prohibition. The opposition to the labor bodies, it is understood, is based chiefly on the assumption that the closing of the saloons, distilleries, breweries and other concerns depending upon the manufacture and sale of liquor, would throw thousands of workmen out of employment, including the entire membership of several national unions affiliated with the federation. Those who have taken this stand believe that with prohibition now one of the leading national issues, the federation can no longer afford to ignore it and that the time has come when it should officially announce its position on the question.

The determination of this element to bring the issue to a head in the coming convention is likely to provoke some heated discussion on the floor. It is feared, in fact, that a serious split may occur in the ranks of organized labor over the liquor issue. While the brewery workers, bartenders, coopers and various other organized crafts are desirous of committing the federation to the defense of the liquor trade, there is an equally determined element that is strongly and outspokenly in favor of prohibition. It is reported that these advocates of prohibition are prepared to go so far as to withdraw from the federation and form a new organization to combat the liquor interests represented in the labor movement, should the coming convention officially declare itself against prohibition.

Owing to the many important questions to come up it is probably that two weeks will be required for the sessions of the convention. The opening session, which will be devoted to the exchange of greetings and the presentation of the officers' annual reports, will be held Monday morning in Festival Hall at the exposition.

Edwin Bevin and Charles G. Ammon, who will attend the convention as fraternal delegates from the British Trades Union Congress, have already arrived in the city. They represent hundreds of thousands of organized workmen in the United Kingdom. The Dominion Federation of Labor, representing the organized crafts in Canada, is also sending delegates to the convention.

BANTAM HORSE EXHIBITION OF NATIONAL HORSE SHOW

Professional Exhibitors Admitted to Novice Classes—Show Ends November 12

New York, Nov. 6.—(By United Press.)—Bantam high-stepping ponies, never before given much consideration among the thoroughbreds of horsemanship, have become so much the fashion that they are, together with the gorgeous gowns of the society women, a big feature of the National Horse Show which opened at Madison Square Garden here today. A few years ago the ponies were not represented in a single horse show either in America or abroad.

Another departure from the rules of former horse shows is the admission of professional exhibitors to novice classes. Professionals heretofore have been excluded. The American and Canadian Hackney horse societies have $500 prizes and gold medals for the best hackneys. The show will end November 12.

USE FOR TOBACCO STEMS.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 6.—A small army of men is being employed by the National Salt and Chemical Company in the work of buying up tobacco stems, which will be the principal fuel used by the company in the manufacture of chemicals in the furnace plant of one of the big breweries which was closed by the prohibition law and has now been taken over by the chemical concern.

While the tobacco stems are being used for fuel the smoke will be run through condensers and the residue will form an important ingredient used in the manufacture of chemicals. Among the products will be soft soap and salt-peter. This is the first time that a use has been found for tobacco stems. Local tobacco plants have always had them hauled away and dumped on refuse piles.

WACO.

Waco, Texas, Nov. 6.—A cotton parade led by Gov. Ferguson driving a team of mules was the feature that marked the formal opening here today of the annual Cotton Palace exhibition at Waco. The exhibition this year far exceeded the previous years in the number and variety of exhibits. Many of the exhibits are represented by the state and there are many displays in addition to that devoted to the exhibition of cotton machinery and cotton products. The management has provided for an elaborate program of festivities during the two weeks of the carnival.

CONGRESS TO BE ASKED TO INCREASE MARINE CORPS

U. S. Marine Corps Will Not Be Represented at Military Show

New York, Nov. 6.—Because every man of their less than ten thousand
is absolutely needed at his post at home or abroad the United States
Marine Corps will not be represented
at this year's military show at Madison square Garden.

The army and navy will be represented as usual but the little Marine Corps which is a part of the navy and yet both, can not afford to send even
a squad to the 1915 tournament.

The "soldiers of the sea," 9,921
strong by law, form the last line of the national mobile defense, and the navy yards of the United States have been almost stripped of marines to furnish the landing forces for ships,
the expeditionary forces for Haiti,
the legation guards at Peking, China,
the Managua, Nicaragua, as well as manning the permanent frontier defense posts at Guantanamo, Cuba.

the Philippines, Guam, and the Ha- vian Islands.

Congress, at its next session, will be asked to increase the Marine Corps by 1,500 officers and men, and it is believed that the request has strong backing in the ranks of the security leagues who wish to see the first line of defense strengthened so as to secure adequate number of marines at home in case of necessity.
